

Functional Anatomy of the Equine Foot in Health and Disease

May 1st & 2nd 2017, Perth WA

Professor Robert M Bowker

PhD, Neurobiology, University of Pennsylvania, 1979 VMD,
Veterinary Medicine, University of Pennsylvania, 1973 BS,
Biology/Chemistry, Springfield College, 1969

Professor Bowker is head of the Hoof Laboratory Research Team based at Michigan State University and a principle lecturer at the Australian College of Equine Podiotherapy.

Professor Bowker concentrates on equine foot function at a cellular level, demonstrating the relationship between internal and external hoof structures in both health and disease. He also discusses the effects of diet, exercise and dental hygiene. In his lectures he relates musculoskeletal and fascial systems of the entire horse.

His research interests focus on navicular syndrome, laminitis and upper body changes in the anatomy in terms of how our husbandry practices and their contributions affect these issues.

Professor Bowker's conferences are suitable not only for hoof-care practitioners, but also therapists, veterinarians, dentists, saddle fitters and all equine professionals and owners.
